This to me is the lesson of Afghanistan. What was achievable was the more limited mission of taking out Al Qaeda in Afghanistan. While well intentioned Western style democracy as an export has not been broadly adopted when we've tried to make that the goal.

Cool story. How about we start talking seriously about canceling anchor debts, raising minimum wages, nationalizing healthcare, taxing the rich, raising corporate tax rates, making post secondary education free, and ending systemically restrictive systems that prevent candidates.

I don't know about this narrative. The WH has been consistent in saying getting vaccinated is the way out of the pandemic. That has been the goal and the focus throughout, even when variants and variables emerged. + The tone has been an effective mix of realistic and optimistic.

The media is the most powerful entity on earth. They have the power to make the innocent guilty and to make the guilty innocent, and that's power. Because they control the minds of the masses

This big, successful, nimble military operation is not getting the credit it deserves (while smaller, less successful ones that prolonged the war and helped lead us to this point received praise, apologias or no scrutiny at all). Why is that?

It's partially because the media seems to be filled with people who on some level want us to stay in Afghanistan, but it's also because it got off to a bad start and genuinely does have some ground to make up to seem competent in people's eyes

> The 36 Hours column last Sunday, about Montpelier, Vt., misspelled part of the name of a hotel there. As the column correctly noted in a reference to the Web site, it is the Capitol Plaza Hotel, not Capital Plaza Hotel. The column also erroneously included several activities that were impossible to do in the time frame suggested. The Coffee Corner cafe closes at 3 p.m. every day, and That's Life Soup is not open on Sundays, so one could not dine at the Coffee Corner on Saturday at 4 p.m. or at That's Life Soup on Sunday at noon. And watching the Mountaineers baseball team at 6:30 p.m. on a Friday is no longer an option because the season ended on Aug. 4.

But what happens when all the inner circles are white??? I agree in theory, but this is how people of color have historically been excluded from decision-making even when they are in roles where they should be included. This only works in orgs that take DEI seriously

Melanie Roussell Newman @MelanieRNewman 4h

Here's an example of happens the inner circle fucks up, does something cringe ey, and asks the outer circle (BIPOC) people to fix it. Work to create teal inclusion, make those inner circles reflect the world you are working for, and then yes, keep them tight

I'm so proud of @BuffyWicks for doing what's hard but important. Her 1st in the nation legislation to require vaccine verification in workplaces across the state would make California healthier, stronger, and more prosperous. Her bill will protect our family — and yours.

The energy some on the left spend literally screaming at Dems and disrupting their events with unhinged behavior has always baffled me. As Clyburn has said, "I was always taught that the first sign of a good education is good manners."

Strong, clear speech on Afghanistan from @POTUS that takes responsibility for the decision-making, lays out all of the variables and choices that the administration faced and addresses lingering Qs. This was needed, and it's compelling.

Grudgingly agree. He doesn't have to explain himself to me, but I think there's a significant contingent that needs/wants to hear it directly. Like it or not, attention spans are short. Now that we're completely out of Afghanistan, a month from now it'll be back to Covid 24/7

This untenable war had to end. 20 yrs of of enormous costs to American lives & economically disastrous to our mountain of debt. What was the real purpose? It was never really defined as different administrations struggled with strategy. Was it a noble effort?,or an epic failure?

The insurability frontier, like the coastline, is retreating. And as usual, it's the people for whom insurance policies were never within reach (think smallholder coffee farmers in Central America) or those for whom they're newly unaffordable, who will bear the losses.

The White House gave big props to Oakland and Berkeley's anti-exclusionary zoning proposals and California's SB 9 in their bulletin today on making housing affordable, combating speculators, and the racial housing gap!

> Recently, there have been welcome developments in California, and Oregon, at the State level, and Berkeley, Cambridge, Minneapolis, Oakland, and Sacramento, at the municipal level, to change the zoning regulations of these jurisdictions to allow more housing units on various land parcels. These moves offer much-needed potential to increase the housing supply, and are consistent with the Administration's stance on the need for zoning reform.

US political media is never, ever allowed to simply say that Biden has shown competence & compassion. It's always, always that he's "projecting," as though there's artifice & political calculation to it. This media habit is so ubiquitous it's invisible.

More broadly, only anger, rage, resentfulness, & malice are ever accepted by the cult of savvy as "authentic." Expressions of prosocial values are always, sometimes subtly & sometimes not, cast as a kind of fakery

The narrative here is pretty accurate and simple. Plus, people didn't want to unwind a bunch of public health measures that would cause continuous COVID outbreaks across the state, and Republicans didn't spend a second talking to indies or Dems.

> Mark Z. Barabak @markzbarabak
> Tweet length Analysis: There are far more Democrats than Republicans in California. Early interest + intensity were on the side of recall proponents. Once @GavinNewsom and allies were able to rouse Democrats to vote in a weirdly timed election, that was that.

Stop recycling this myth that Blue Dogs lost for supporting cap and trade? Most voted no & those of us who voted YES outperformed them.

> BACK TO THE FUTURE: This is a familiar predicament for centrist House Democrats representing competitive districts. Many lost their seats in the early 1990s after BILL CLINTON pressed them to back a BTU-fuel tax only to abandon the provision when it bogged down in the Senate. Republicans ran ads against those members, who didn't like the provision in the first place, and they lost the majority in 1994. Similarly, the Blue Dogs nearly went extinct after they backed cap-and-trade legislation in 2009. It too went nowhere, and they were pilloried during the campaign. It's not uncommon to hear moderates today say, "We don't want to get 'cap-and-traded' or 'BTUed' again."

This encapsulates how so many of us feel about Yankee Hotel Foxtrot:

> Yankee Hotel Foxtrot is an album for all hours and all seasons. It sounds incredible at dawn and at dusk, during afternoon barbecues and after-midnight drives, in the oppressive heat of summer and the bitter depths of winter and those glorious transitional phases in between when the air is crisp with possibility. When I'm happy, it elevates my joy. When I'm sad, it accentuates my melancholy. It is the movie I can put on in the background because I've seen it a million times but can just as easily end up immersed in all over again. I didn't have to revisit it to write this retrospective because I've never really stopped listening to it.

Air pollution caused by fossil fuels amounts to a cost of $1.6 billion every day that the U.S. fails to pass crucial climate legislation.

So no we can't afford to hit pause on the Build Back Better Act.

The amount of oil produced off the California coast is a drop in the bucket.

According to most recent Department of Interior data, annual oil production off the California coast was about one-third of what the nation produces in a single day.

The risks just aren't worth it.

Walgreens has long planned to close hundreds of locations. In an SEC filing in August 2019 Walgreens stated that it planned to close approximately 200 US stores following "a review of the real estate footprint in the United States."

So is Walgreens closing stores because of theft or because of a pre-existing business plan to cut costs and increase profits by consolidating stores and shifting customers to online purchases? 3/4

Our office is seeking further clarity on the reasons for the announced closures and whether there is a path to keeping the 300 Gough store open. We thank community members for reaching out and emphasizing their desire for a pharmacy in the neighborhood. 4/4

What are you doing to address the retail theft issue which we've all seen with our own two eyes? Can you call the company to work on a constructive plan to meet their needs and keep the store open, rather than just making an unsubstantiated claim?

Biden already ran on this in 2020 calling cash bail the "modern-day debtors' prison." His own campaign said a lot more about ending cash bail than this report seems to

Josh Kraushaar @HotlineJosh 2h

The position was politically questionable then, but even moreso now given the spike in crime in cities like NYC where such policies have been implemented

Plenty of work has been done by credible CJR groups on the left and right to develop tools that determine who is a safety and flight risk that just allowing people to buy their way out of detention does not

Last night the Board of Supes rejected a project with 500 new homes to replace a parking lot.

It met the criteria for approval and it would have created 100+ new affordable homes.

If you're wondering how we got into our housing crisis, this is how.

Supervisors raised vague concerns about gentrification and possible shadows to justify rejecting the analysis of the experts at the Planning Dept.

This was in a hearing over supposed environmental concerns. We're talking about a parking lot in SoMa surrounded by high-rises

Disappointed in my supervisor @RafaelMandelman for not supporting this project, especially when the D6 @MattHaneySF did. You need to be the forward thinker we need, but this a big step backwards. @sfbos

President Biden said the agenda is "not about left v. right or moderates v. progressives" -- or anything else that pits Americans against one another. It's about keeping the US competitive, he said, adding: "It's about leading the world or letting the world pass us by."

Even with Medicare who can afford a hearing device!! The price on these are astronomical!!
Lowering the age of Medicare and adding vision and dental its a no brainer but to only get hearing aid coverage What a slap in the face to senior citizens! Come on we can do better

Market rate housing is housing.

If you support making it illegal to build market rate housing then you (like this clown) are anti-housing; if you are on the other side you are pro-housing.

Market housing also generates tax revenue that can be used to fund subsidized housing.

> Dean Preston @DeanPreston
> The ongoing use of "pro-housing" to refer to advocates for market rate housing but not advocates for affordable housing is pure propaganda I expect it from the real estate industry, but media should hold itself to a higher standard

You oppose every housing development that is actually proposed by a developer and voted to save a parking lot instead of building hundreds of housing units for the middle class. You don't deliver any outcomes, just bullshit process and delay.

The interesting flipside of this, though, is that polling that showed Gov Newsom suddenly in a shockingly close race with Larry Elder is widely credited with waking up the Democratic electorate Of course VA Dems hoped for the same and didn't get the result they wanted

Bad polling is bad Maybe good polling is good It's increasingly a question whether the latter exists anymore. though CA and VA actually seem like pretty well-polled races. especially with trend lines

.@Ford Motor Company's statement on the House's passage of the bipartisan infrastructure bill:

> "Last night's vote is great news for the United States' infrastructure and transition to a zero emissions transportation future. Ford is committed to leading the electric vehicle revolution and doing our part by investing tens of billions of dollars in EVs and making fully electric versions of our most iconic and popular vehicles. We look forward to seeing this bipartisan investment signed into law by President Biden and continuing to work with our government partners to combat climate change, make it easier for people to move, and support American workers and manufacturing."

NEW PROJECT!

Me & other constituents of @DeanPreston spent >100 hours digging into obscure city records to quantify his housing record.

What we found was staggering: he's blocked homes for 8,587 people, and opposed them for 28,708.

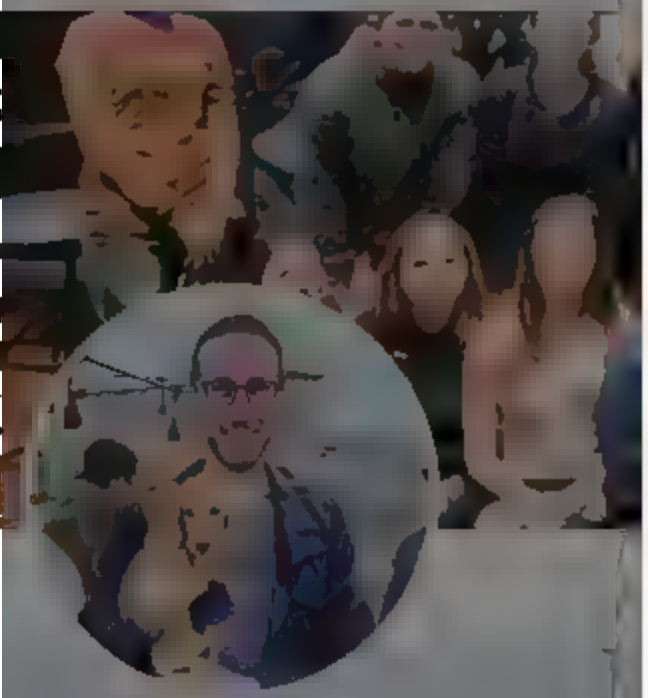
The details behind these eye-popping numbers are even more outrageous.



E.g., Preston blocked housing for 8,449 people down the block from me. Public records show a local landlord asked Preston to block it, & he then publicly thanked her when he did!

This is a great move by The Verge to reposition "on background" to its original use in reporting. I hope reporters also restore two source attribution at some point as well. "Someone said" is a hell of a drug and not quality journalism.

The Squad's inability to get to yes on legislation that would fund transit in their districts and get lead out of drinking water isn't playing well among their constituents.

Maybe voters should get rid of their representatives who are entirely committed to keeping attention on themselves while having no interest in doing things to help their districts?

This is a lot to take in about the GOP's 2022 Senate candidates:
washingtonpost.com/politics/repub …

> The party's front-runner in Pennsylvania, Sean Parnell, is awaiting a judge's ruling on accusations, which he denies, that he choked his estranged wife and hit one of his children. The top-polling Missouri GOP candidate, former governor Eric Greitens, is trying to downplay his resignation from office after allegedly tying up his mistress in the basement of his marital home. And in Georgia, the party's likely nominee, Herschel Walker, is bracing for a Democratic advertising assault about his ex-wife's claims that he threatened her with a gun.

These are bad numbers but the data now has to distinguish between the vaccinated and unvaccinated. This isn't intended to be a cruel statement. But my reaction to this in terms of how the vaccinated should live is dependent on knowing. The vax and unvax shouldn't be aggregated.

There's also no path to victory without winning back voters who turned out in 2020 but are now thinking about staying home. I would love to see some focus groups about what those folks are thinking as well.

It's not either/or with these two types of voters. We have to get both.

This hits every Dem pathology. Animated by things that voters aren't. Taking cues about what's important from the wrong places. An aversion to bread & butter issues. Histrionics. Think we can fact our way to persuasion. We need to shift our approach to messaging in basic ways.

As Joe Rogan gets ever more extreme—hanging out with far-right freaks, pushing ivermectin and false-flag theories about Jan. 6—his big corporate backers like Spotify, the UFC, and ESPN have nothing to say about it:

A lot of Joe Rogan enthusiasts seem to think it's really unfair to judge him by what he does and says and who he associates with!

I've been saying this for days - thank you. Case counts are not the most important metric anymore, they actually don't tell us much. Are people getting seriously sick and or being hospitalized? That is a much more useful metric.

There are a lot of scary Covid case charts floating around right now but here's an interesting argument that case numbers aren't the right metric for judging a world with vaccines and Omicron nytimes.com/2021/12/11/op[illegible]

Quite the rejoinder from @PressSec to @SenatorManchin, who they say this morning contradicted what he'd been telling @POTUS all week.

Statement from Press Secretary Jen Psaki

Manchin's comments this morning on FOX are at odds with his discussions with the President, with White House staff, and with his own public statements. Senator Manchin's comments mean that the President has been working with the Build Back Better framework that the President then subsequently announced Manchin pledged repeatedly to negotiate on finalizing that framework in day of this week Senator Manchin met at the White House and submitted, in person, a redacted written outline for a Build Back Better deal. That was the first and scope of the President's framework and covered many of the same key provisions. While that framework was missing key provisions we believed could be accepted by Senator Manchin, it provided a constructive starting point to work with us to reach that common ground. If his comments today indicate an end to that effort, they represent a sudden and abrupt reversal in his position and a breach of his commitments to the President, for his colleagues in the House and Senate.

Manchin claims that this change of position is related to inflation, but the often cited Build Back Better Act, the Penn Wharton Budget Institute less than 48 hours ago that noted the Build Back Better Act will have virtually no inflationary pressures in the short term and, in the long run, the policies it includes pressures. Many leading economists with whom Senator Manchin frequently also support Build Back Better.

Senator Manchin will have to explain to those families why they need to keep paying, but instead of spending time to the nearly two million women who would benefit to work why he opposes a plan to get them back to the Child Tax Credit, why he wants to end a program we cannot.

[illegible] we have gotten done in 2021, the American Rescue Plan, the largest investment in U.S. history, the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law, accountability, schools reopened, the fastest recovery in the world, and historic appointments to the Federal judiciary.

[illegible] in the fight to help Americans with their child costs, and elder care, and to combat climate change. It is important to give up. We will find a way to move

I walked through the Tenderloin last night, one block to see a Christmas play. Bunch of open air drug dealing and doing, heroin etc. Some guy smoking crack at the bus stop. All a half block away from a police station with ~10 police cars out front. No response.

White Lotus and Squid Game lived up to the hype. Succession transformed from dark comedy to Shakespearean drama and Handmaid's Tale was revenge porn. But Deutschland, Hacks and Call My Agent (Diz Pourcent) made my year! Different grades of comedy, but deeply enjoyable.

Tick Tick Boom is the untold story behind Rent and Andrew Garfield brings electric energy and charisma to the role. Pig looked crazy but it was Nicholas Cage's best movie in 10+ years. Kristen Stewart brings Carrie Matheson energy to Diana in Spencer and perfectly plays the role.

I read all of Tana French's Irish detective books and The Searcher was a nice break from her series. The Topeka School pondered how we got to Trump's America through the eyes of one family. And Lauren Groff just nails her characters every time, I couldn't resist Fates and Furies.

(1) Being the president I'm sure is no easy job and nobody's going to like every choice that was made nor do we know the truth about why they made the choices they did probably. But we've tried everything else why not listen to Marianne Williamson and try love

A clear bias toward the negative is bad for media credibility

If the media reports bad news with 100% certainty and good news with heavily caveated 10% certainty, we're practically begging our smart readers to distrust.

You know when something seems normal but it was just your family? I had a waterbed. My sister had a waterbed. My parents had a waterbed. We'd regularly wake up covered in water when the cat would jump in bed while we slept, piercing the mattress. I thought this was normal

Lots of anecdotes out there but in this YouGov poll only 9% of people having trouble getting at-home tests (doesn't seem very high, contra the narrative?)

There aren't many opponents to the school board recall but those few try to claim "this is a waste of money!".

How does that make any sense given Alison Collins LITERALLY sued our own schools for $87M. She wanted to take money away from kids and put it her pocket.

Vote her out!

> Pete Skomoroch ✓ @peteskomoroch
> The unfortunate truth of the SF School Board recall is that the left should have handled it internally before it got to this point. SF Mayor, State Senators, Board of Supervisors, etc all asked them to resign. Imagine the ego to not quit, but instead sue your coworkers for $87M

Nothing you guys did would change the dynamic that it's difficult to have a long democratic primary that doesn't quickly coalesce around one candidate when an incumbent Republican is on the ballot. 2008 and 2016 could be longer primaries because it was an open seat election.

Filed my story from the Val-Air. Head to hotel. Phone rings. It's my editor. He asks, "Why didn't you write about that weird dying bird noise he made?"

Still not sure if the lesson is that TV distorts reality or that the shared reality of TV is realer than physical space

It has always been scary how technologically far behind the government is when you get away from DOD/Intel. My first day in the WH in 2009, my computer crashed because I went to the NYT homepage and it had too much multimedia on it

You can't ask for a better SCOTUS team @BenLaBolt is the best out there. He knows exactly what needs to get done & he was at the WH during both the Sotomayor & Kagan confirmations - and WH is VERY lucky to have him.

the Supreme Court Justice process @Doug_Jones @IanMinyon and @BenLaBolt

Doug Jones is a former United States Senator from the State of Alabama. He will advise President Biden on navigating the Senate confirmation process. The first Democratic Senator from Alabama in a quarter century, Jones passed dozens of bipartisan bills into law and started a bipartisan tradition of reading Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.'s "Letter from a Birmingham Jail" in the Senate chamber. Jones was previously the U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Alabama, where he prosecuted and won the conviction of two Ku Klux Klan members for the 1963 Birmingham church bombing that killed four African-American girls. A native of Fairfield, Alabama, Jones is a graduate of the University of Alabama and Samford University.

Minyon Moore, Nomination Advisor for Engagement

Minyon Moore is a top public affairs strategist and organizer tapped by President Biden to mobilize a nationwide engagement effort focused on confirmation. Moore currently leads Dewey Square Group's State and Local Affairs and Multicultural Strategies practices, where she helps clients build coalitions and engage on public policy goals. Moore previously served as President Clinton's Director of White House Political Affairs and Director the White House Office of Public Liaison, as well as Chief Operating Officer of the Democratic National Committee. Moore coauthored For Colored Girls Who Have Considered Politics in 2018. A Chicago native, she attended the University of Illinois at Chicago and graduated from the Boston University Digital Filmmaking Program (DC).

Ben LaBolt, Nomination Advisor for Communications

Ben LaBolt is a leading communications strategist joining the White House to advise President Biden on communications and messaging around the confirmation process. LaBolt is a partner at Bully Pulpit Interactive who served as an advisor to the Biden-Harris Transition. He was previously the national press secretary for President Obama's re-election campaign and a White House Assistant Press Secretary. LaBolt has two decades of experience advising for national, state, and local elected officials and campaigns, and served as the White House spokesman on the team to confirm Justices Sonia Sotomayor and Justice Elena Kagan. A native of LaGrange, Illinois, LaBolt is a graduate of Middlebury College.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE
February 2, 2022

President Biden Announces Additional Advisers for Supreme Court Process

As President Biden considers a range of deeply qualified potential nominees for the Supreme Court and seeks the advice of lawmakers in both parties as well as legal experts across the country, he is adding three new advisers to the nomination and confirmation process.

Ben LaBolt, Nomination Adviser for Communications

Ben LaBolt is a leading communications strategist joining the White House to advise President Biden on communications and messaging around the confirmation process. LaBolt is a partner at Bully Pulpit Interactive who served as an adviser to the Biden-Harris Transition. He was previously the national press secretary for President Obama's re-election campaign and a White House Assistant Press Secretary. LaBolt has over decades of experience advising for national, state and local elected officials and campaigns, and served as the White House spokesman on

It's widely known that @BenLaBolt is a great comms strategist but did you also know he's a great professor?

Years ago @josytheriveter and I somehow convinced him to do an independent study with us at NYU and we had a blast learning from one of the best

Thanks, prof!

Judge Ketanji Brown Jackson

One of my favorite poems is "I Am a Black Woman," by Mari Evans and it abides in my spirit since I memorized it in high school. It feels extremely defining in this moment. The last stanza is:

I am a Black woman—
Tall as a cypress
Strong
Defying place and time
And circumstance
Assailed
Impervious
Indestructible
Look on me and be renewed.

I'm feeling great renewal today for the grit and grace of our new Supreme Court Justice, Ketanji

Melanie Roussell Newman @MelanieRNewman 14m

I will say the disenchantment is a real problem and whether the GOP actually peels voters away or not is irrelevant if Black voters stop showing up. Having Black Justice and VP is great, but people aren't seeing lives improve in meaningful ways that make voting seem worth it.

Melanie Roussell Newman @MelanieRNewman 12m

If anything it feels like is it getting much much worse. Look at Covid deaths by race. Debt to income. Housing costs, gas costs. Police brutality. LGBTQ and abortion laws hit Black and Brown people first. That's lived experience & some don't see value in voting 4 Dems

I'm just saying, don't discount the disenchantment point. It's real and should be addressed

Their coalition is made up of older black voters, older millennial HENRYs, Asian Americans, working class union Democrats, wine moms and Gaybraham Lincoln drag queens. Together they have majority power in the city, and they are trying to put an end to the leftward lurch by reasserting the more practical liberalism of the late aughts glory days

But in reality, Matt Haney is just the latest sign of a broader, bottom up push among Democrats within the city for practical, liberal reform - the sort that prioritizes competence, public safety, quality education, and affordable housing over appealing to socialist Twitch streamers.

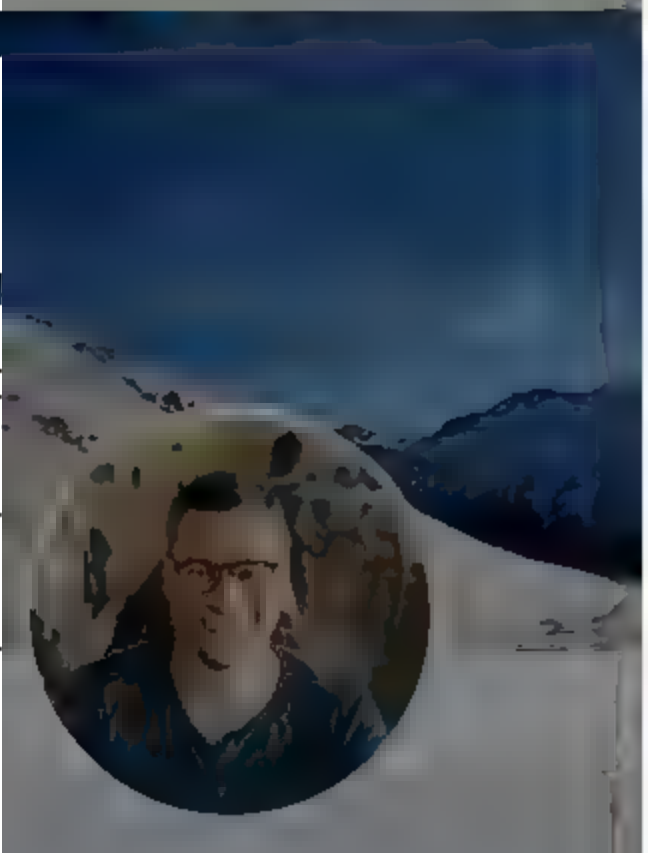
It's resurgence of the Obama Democrats. My take:



The tide is now turning against the ideologues and with the Democrats that aren't willing to defend children stepping on needles, dropped prosecutions for hate crimes against the Asian American community, a school board that tried to cancel Abraham Lincoln... Obama Democrats have always believed that good policy and government can change people's lives for the better. In San Francisco we pragmatists demand change and we are getting it

The unemployment rate was 6.4% when I took office. Now, because of our economic plans, it's down to 3.6%.

That's the fastest decline in unemployment ever recorded.

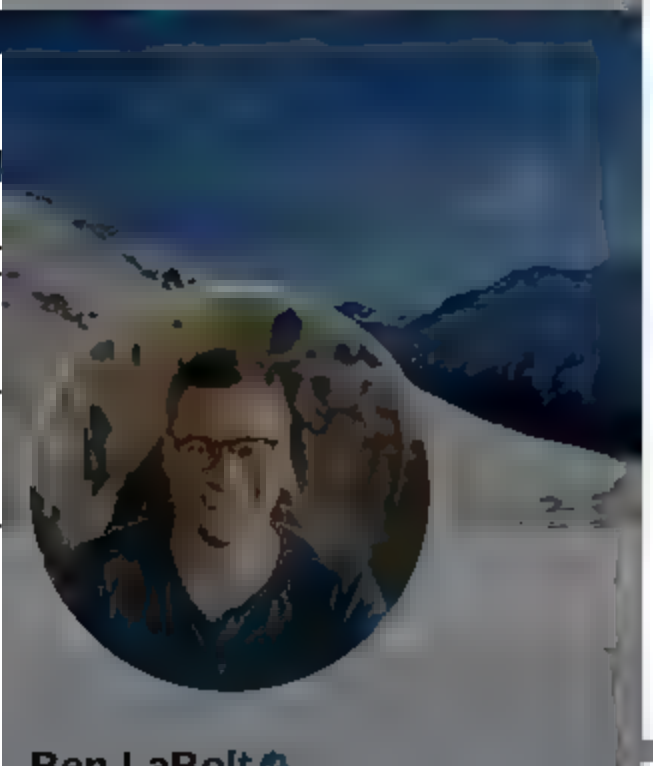
Two pieces, actually.

1. If you want to end up in DC, get the hell out of DC for a while. Being out in the real world makes you better when you get to DC.



2. You're not so special to not start by doing clips. Deal with it. Do the best clips ever, and the rest will follow.

If you rewatch the questioning from many of the Republican Senators during Judge Jackson's confirmation, they were attempting to undermine the precedents set in Roe, Casey, Obergefell and other SCOTUS rulings. Braun even let it slip he was fine with Loving being overturned.

The goal here is not a respect for precedent. It's a radical turning back of the clock against the will of most Americans and a power grab by the conservative Justices on the Court.

Last night's stunning breach was an attack on the independence of the Supreme Court. By every indication, this was yet another escalation in the radical left's ongoing campaign to bully and intimidate federal judges and substitute mob rule for the rule of law.

Some people are going to claim Boudin lost because of tech money or right-wing meddling or something other than the will of the city's voters, but this is a lopsided margin — 62-39% with 2/3rds of the vote in — in San Francisco

SF has a a reputation but take it from someone who lives across the Bay, works there, and has done politics there for over a decade — the whole city is not the Haight-Asbury hippies lol. It has a vibrant leftist movement but the median voters' liberalism is very mainstream.

Your criticisms of U.S. foreign policy would be more compelling to me if (1) you sometimes praised U.S. foreign policy, and (2) you sometimes criticized other great powers. If the US is always wrong & Russia & China are never wrong, then maybe your analysis is biased.

Here is the Republican message on everything of importance:
1. They can tell people what to do.
2. You cannot tell them what to do.

This often gets mistaken for hypocrisy, there's an additional layer of complexity to this (later in the thread), but this is the basic formula.

Spend time with any big city mayor for one day and they'll tell you the biggest problem they face is too many guns on the street. Telling electeds they can't make meaningful progress to reduce deaths, with reforms supported by a strong majority, is outrageous judicial activism.

A Supreme Court that once stood as the bulwark of individual rights is now conducting a radical assault on them. These Justices aren't finished ripping us back in time against the will of most Americans. Few times in our history have been more important for advocacy than now.

After endorsing 2 candidates that lost the primary, the NYT has done 2 stories saying Biden shouldn't run again. Both were light on people actually saying that. Then they polled it -- and buried the lede that Biden is beating Trump. Are they going to hold a press conference next?

After endorsing 2 candidates that lost the primary, the NYT has done 2 stories saying Biden shouldn't run again. Both were light on people actually saying that. Then they polled it -- and buried the lede that Biden is beating Trump. Are they going to hold a press conference next?

After endorsing 2 candidates that lost the primary, the NYT has done 2 stories saying Biden shouldn't run again. Both were light on people actually saying that. Then they polled it -- and buried the lede that Biden is beating Trump. Are they going to hold a press conference next?

After endorsing 2 candidates that lost the primary, the NYT has done 2 stories saying Biden shouldn't run again. Both were light on people actually saying that. Then they polled it -- and buried the lede that Biden is beating Trump. Are they going to hold a press conference next?

NEW: Biden promises executive action on climate as talks with Manchin stumble. "Let me be clear: if the Senate will not move to tackle the climate crisis and strengthen our domestic clean energy industry, I will take strong executive action to meet this moment."

July 15, 2022

Statement by President Joe Biden

Action on climate change and clean energy remains more urgent than ever.

So let me be clear: if the Senate will not move to tackle the climate crisis and strengthen our domestic clean energy industry, I will take strong executive action to meet this moment. My actions will create jobs, improve our energy security, bolster domestic manufacturing and supply chains, protect us from oil and gas price hikes in the future, and address climate change. I will not back down: the opportunity to create jobs and build a clean energy future is too

Economic progress for working families is still at the top of the list for this election. But make no mistake: Democrats moving to protect individual rights for all Americans, while Republicans turn back the clock decades on societal progress, is also critically important.

More like back to the 90s era war on drugs wasting tax dollars on mass incarceration, and all with exactly the same failed outcomes that back in 2018 drove SFPD to more progressive approaches like diversion Sadly we never saw that approach through policy align perfectly. If Chuck Schumer brings this bill up it may very well attract 10 Republican votes, giving President Biden a worthwhile win. And if it falls short, then the Democrats will have another campaign issue to use targeting suburban swing voters and the apathetic youths.

This is a very smart strategy and I'm elated to see Congressional Democrats stepping up to the plate on this. The reactionary culture wars coming from the Court and GOP leaders are not in line with the views of the clear majority of Americans.

In fact the House vote is already providing political opportunity for Senate Democrats. Among the NAYs in the marriage vote was Rep. Ted Budd, the GOP nominee for Senate in North Carolina. Budd is now on the record with a vote that would allow the state of North Carolina to annul gay marriages if the Republicans are swept into power. That is...not a winner in Charlotte, let me tell you. Will it be the #1 voting issue in NC? No. But it could be part of a broader campaign to

The Inflation Reduction Act: ⬇ health insurance costs, ⬆ domestic energy production while combatting the existential climate change threat, reducing the deficit & zero tax increases for families making under 400K. Landmark, game-changing legislation!

washingtonpost.com
What's in the Charles Schumer Joe Manchin 'Inflation Reduction Act'
The package is smaller than Democrats' initial ambitions would transform huge sectors of the U.S. economy and affect millions of Americans

A Victory of Biden, and a Bet on America's Future

Congress gave final approval to the Inflation Reduction Act, which will lower the cost of prescription drugs, extend health care subsidies and invest billions into climate and energy programs.

And "breaking through" now means what's in the local paper and on local tv, what's moving on non elite social platforms, what's being discussed in consumer media and what's being talked about in advertising. That definition is far more relevant than just the Times or the Post.

The Don't Say Gay law passage wasn't the final chapter -- bunch of crazy stuff happening in school districts after passage

Jack Petocz @Jack_Petocz 17m
Sarasota County schools literally just mandated teachers out LGBTQ+ students to their parents This is dangerous, irrational and horrifying

Children will be harassed assaulted thrown out of their home and even killed in the name of DeSantis gaining more power Hate it here

Students will have to request the change to school staff, who will then notify administrators and school counsellors. When the young person's parent or guardian gives consent, they must have a meeting with their family, school counsellor and administrator to complete a "Gender Support Plan".

If they don't receive permission, the young person will have to be deadnamed and misgendered by staff.

"If a student tells us that (they) are gay/gender questioning/trans, etc, parent must be notified," the guidance says.

This is a tipping point moment for the nation – for our values and rights, our democracy, and for the middle class. I'm ready to suit up and help the President and team, which includes many longtime friends and colleagues, finish the job. I will give it my all. 2/3

I will miss my colleagues at BPI. Building this agency over the past 7 years has been a labor of love and I'm so lucky to work with some of the smartest, most talented and innovative people. It was a gratifying and unforgettable experience and I know you'll be in great hands. 3/3
